DRINKING ACCORDING TO LAW

The United States is faced with a liquor problem. With no desire to interfere in a dispute in which I have no immediate concern, may I relate a few angles of the liquor problem in the Province of Ontario in the hope that America may avoid some of our Canadian errors, no matter how she may decide to settle her own house?

The Ontario Temperance Act was a prohibitory measure which outlawed liquor very much after the fashion of the Volstead Act. The saloon and its attendant evils was done away with, and public drunkenness became so rare as to be almost unheard of. By far the larger part of the convictions for drunkenness found on the police court records during the life of the O. T. A. were as a result of raids upon bootlegging establishments. The enforcement of the act was good, and a generation of youngsters was growing up to whom liquor was no more than a name. Despite the assertions of the liquor interests, conditions under the O. T. A. were good and were constantly improving. Many who had been steady but moderate drinkers refused to patronize the bootlegger and observed the law, realizing that it was best for themselves as well as for the youth of the country.

But under the premiership of Mr. G. H. Ferguson, the Ontario Temperance Act was declared to be a failure, and a referendum was held to decide whether it was to be retained or abolished. The referendum gave a substantial majority in favor of retaining the existing law. Mr. Ferguson, in the face of public opinion, proceeded to replace the law on the statute books by a measure legalizing government sale of liquor.

Sale by the Government lent an aura of respectability to the liquor traffic which it had lost in the days of the hole in the corner bootlegger, whose patronage was surely a very minor quality when compared with the number of those who at once bought permits to purchase government liquor. Drinking became legal, but only in the legal domicile of the purchaser. The result was to place liquor for the first time readily within the reach of the women of the country.

A party among the younger married people of the Province of Ontario is frequently a beer party, at which men and women drink freely. Of a large number of married couples, I can recall almost none who do not drink at least occasionally. The younger crowd, just out of high school, is also learning the taste of government booze.

Liquor is no longer outlawed and difficult to obtain, and as a result drinking in larger measure than before prevails. By making liquor easier to obtain, the Government promotes the use of it. Ease of access does not induce either abstinence or moderation.

Prohibition, admittedly, did not entirely do away with the evils of the liquor traffic. It did, however, reduce them to a very desirable minimum. Government sale is a step backward which the thinking people of the Province of Ontario view with increasing distrust and regret.

Toronto, Can. W. E. London.

SUPERSTITION

Not a few customs of ship life are founded on superstition, for seamen have ever been most superstitious. A belief in the virtue of odd numbers was prevalent in the early days of maritime history, and is evident in the fact that all national, festival, and personal salutes consist of an odd number of guns. We find that three, seven and nine and their multiples all were considered lucky.

There is a common idea among sailors that a ship is almost human. "She can do anything but talk, and sometimes she even do that," said a captain of the Civil War Navy. A commodore in our Navy in the early eighties endorsed this theory, and was known to talk to the mizzenmast of his ship, asking it what sail to carry.

Friday has been universally regarded by seamen of the Christian era as an unlucky day on which to weigh anchor, because of its association with the crucifixion. Originally this day of the week was held a propitious one to set sail on, for it was named in honor of the goddess Freya or Frigg, wife of Odin, and patroness of ships.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Claud Johnson at Long Branch, on Sunday, Jan. 8, a girl—Frieda.

Wants More Money

For the second time within two weeks the Governor of Kentucky has declared in solemn and insistent terms that the next session of the state legislature must levy upon the people of Kentucky a general sales tax.

This last pronouncement was made at a Chamber of Commerce banquet at Richmond on Tuesday evening of this week. It is significant to note in this connection that President Hoover sent greetings to the Richmond convalesce. Significant because the ultimate object of the meeting evidently fits in with Mr. Hoover's own ideas of tax extraction.

It is well that this tax program

PRINT RESTRAINS SPENDERS

Complete publicity showing receipts and expenditures in local government is one of the most effective means of keeping public expenses down, James P. McDonnell of Buffalo, vice president of the Minnesota Taxpayer's association, declared in a talk recently. Published reports in newspapers give every taxpayer a chance to "check up" on public transactions, and taxpayers can follow up with protests when these appear necessary.

It has been demonstrated in Minnesota that public opinion can definitely curb public expenditures. But the public must be kept informed through public statements. The knowledge that all transactions will appear in print has a restraining influence on public spenders. There never has been a time when public reports were more thoroughly scanned by a tax-conscious people than they are today. It is a wholesome condition. It brings the taxpayer closer to his government, and its general effect will be better government," Mr. McDonnell declared.

"Personally I believe that it is very helpful and enlightening to taxpayers if the comments of the public examiner were also made part of legal examination. After this official examines the books and records showing the financial transactions of county officials, he compiles a report and attaches his personal comment. The personal comment would give an insight into affairs that might otherwise go unnoticed. It would be another method of keeping the public informed and of keeping public officials alert."—Winchester Sun.

THE SALES TAX

The Progressive Farmer which is always alert on public questions and policies affecting the welfare of the farm family presents in its January issue the following condensed arguments against the general sales tax:

1. It will fall most heavily on farmers and home owners, those already paying the bulk of the states taxes.
2. It is based on the dishonest and uneconomic principle of "inability to pay."
3. It will tax the poor a higher percentage than the rich.
4. It is an insidious method of reducing wages and increasing unemployment.
5. It is a direct blow at the sale of goods.
6. It gives mail order houses and out of state business an advantage over local business.
7. It allows uncontrolled extravagance in governmental expenditures.
8. It requires no tax receipt, thus seeking its end by concealment and deception.
9. It hastens the concentration of wealth into the hands of the few.
10. It is "privileged wealth's" most effective "taxi" against a graduated income tax.

The Printer

The printer is a faithful servant, not only for those connected with the business, but also for the public at large. Without him what would be the state of the world at large? Why, tyrants and humbugs in all countries would have everything their own way. The printer is the friend of intelligence and thought; he is the friend of liberty, of freedom, of law; indeed, the printer is the friend of every man who is the friend of order—the friend of every man who can read. Of all the inventions, of all the discoveries in science or art, of all the great results in the wonderful progress of mechanical energy and skill, the printer is the only product of civilization necessary to the existence of free man.—Charles Dickens.

GREATEST WOMEN

From time to time some bunch of women get together and announce to the world a list of "America's greatest women." We have never taken any stock in such selections. They are usually made by women of the old maid type who have lots of time on their hands and who maintain mutual admiration societies. "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours," ought to be their motto—for that is the principle on which they work.

First we hear one of these great women bulging into public prominence with a tribute to "the work" some other woman has done. A little later the woman who has been so puffed up with adulation contributes to the cause by singing the praises of another woman. Then this woman in turn joins in the chorus of praise and makes a heroine out of a third member of the circle.

It's a nice little round-robin—but it has no value or significance. As a rule such public women would never be heard of by the generality of mankind if members of their own set didn't systematically boost them.

Mrs. Florence P. Kahn, Representative in Congress from California, has the true idea. Commenting on the lists of alleged "greatest American women," she declared that our greatest women are probably unknown to the general public. Mrs. Kahn bears out what we have already said, when she adds: "A great woman has a well-rounded life, not a life in one groove. In making any list the tendency is to include women in your own particular line."

Oh, boy, what a slap Mrs. Kahn has given to the collegiate educators, social organizers and professional women generally!

It is utterly the wrong thing to hold up to the women and girls of this country as ideals those types of women who have managed to get into the spotlight by crowding their way to the front—usually at the expense of thousands of their sister women who are more modest and more truly womanly. Only a very few of the lucky ones can expect to have such a career.

No, as Mrs. Kahn has so courageously and aptly said, our greatest women are "unknown"—and let us hope that they will remain so. Our greatest women heroines are in the homes of this nation, not in the professional chairs of colleges or listed as the heads of organizations. We would never look for the name of one of them in "Who's Who"—Pathfinder.

Peanut Politics

In assuming his duties as judge of the Circuit Court in Lawrence county Judge Wolford took occasion to criticize the legislature for the judicial change in this part of the state, calling it "unfair" and an exhibition of "peanut politics." The judge told his court that he felt out of place in presiding over a court where he had not been elected to do so.

Revenues Far Behind

United States revenues are falling behind expenditures at the rate of $100,000,000 monthly.

This is $3,333,000 a day.

It is $140,000 an hour.

It is $2,300 a minute.

And this has been going on for more than two years. We are on the way.

Old Jerusalem

Josephus says that the population of Jerusalem when it was destroyed in 70 A. D. was 1,000,000. Tacitus places it at 600,000. It is now believed that these figures are exaggerations and that the population was between 30,000 and 45,000.

Rheumatism and Sleep

Going to bed too late has been found by London physicians to be a contributing cause of rheumatism, from which disease 30,000 children of the city suffer.

BYRD

Mrs. Malinda Byrd died at her home at Pomeroyton in Menfee county on January 2 at the age of 73 years, 6 months and 25 days.

Her husband, I. C. Byrd, and brothers, E. M. Williams of West Liberty, C. D. Williams of Demund and D. J. Williams of Pomeroyton and a sister Mollie Lawson, also of Pomeroyton survive.

Funeral services were conducted at the late home and burial services at the Pomeroyton cemetery on January 4, with Rev. Humphrey in charge.

NICKELL

Malone, Jan. 10, 1933. On Friday morning, January 6, 1933, the messenger of death, speeding on his silent way, stopped at the bedside of our friend and kinsman, Earl Nickell, and called him from his earthly labors to a reward unknown. The deceased was eighteen years old November 20, and was first stricken with influenza December 27, which later developed into pneumonia.

Throughout his sickness his suffering was terrible but he bore it all with calm patience always having a smile and cherry words for his friends as they gathered around his bedside. He had not yet reached the heights of manhood when he lay down to sleep that sleep that knows no awakening. The silver cord is loosened the golden chord is broken. The body has returned to the dust as it was and the spirit unto God who gave it.

Surviving the deceased are his mother, Mrs. Dora Nickell of Malone, four sisters, Mrs. James Nickell of Stacy Fork, Mrs. S. J. Friend of West Liberty, and Misses Doshia and Christine Nickell of Malone and one brother Dennis Nickell of Malone, besides a host of friends and relatives to mourn his departure. Services were conducted at the family residence Friday night by Rev. Scudder of West Liberty and on Saturday morning the remains were taken to the Nickell cemetery at Tarkhill where services were conducted by Rev. Kelly Bolin, after which, interment took place in the said graveyard there to await the call on the resurrection morn.

Card of Thanks

We take this opportunity to thank our friends and neighbors for the many kindnesses shown us during the sickness and death of our dear son and brother, Earl Nickell.

Presching Appointment

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

Farm Organizations to Meet

Farm organizations will hold special sessions at the 21st annual Farm and Home Convention at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky January 24-27. Among the organizations to meet on Tuesday, the opening day of the convention, are the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, the Kentucky Beekeepers' Association, the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers, the Kentucky Seed Improvement Association, the Kentucky Jersey Cattle Club, the Kentucky Holstein Cattle Club and the Kentucky Guernsey Cattle Club.

The special session for dairy farmers will be addressed by several successful Kentucky dairymen and by A. J. Glover, editor of "Hoard's Dairyman," who also will speak at the general session of the convention on Tuesday.

Lander Skinner, Winchester, president of the Kentucky Beekeepers' Association, will preside at the winter meeting of that organization on Tuesday, when general problems of honey production will be discussed.

Phases of breeding, feeding, disease control and marketing will be the subjects of speakers at a special meeting for stockholders on Tuesday. Among the speakers will be R. F. Guy, Chicago, head lamb buyer for Swift & Co. Farmers on this program include Jack Dennis, Versailles; M. D. Royse, Winchester, and Marsh Henshaw, Henshaw.

Sheep Help Farmers

The cooperative program of the Golden Hoof Club and County Agent R. H. Lickert is making sheep one of the major sources of income in Fleming county. Local purebred breeders sold all their rams in 1932, and there was general improvement in the quality of lambs produced in the county. Ewes and lambs were better fed, and a large percentage of the lambs received grain.

More farmers are standardizing their lambs. Eighty percent of the sheep in the county were drenched, 1932 being the first year that drenching was universally practiced in the county. Members of the Golden Hoof Club were active in enforcing the dog law, and in a general educational program for sheepraisers.

Farm Organizations

Another meeting will be held for farmers interested in soils and crops, marketing and farm economics. Tobacco, lespedeza, pastures, farm planning and other subjects will be discussed. W. B. Belknap, Goshen, Ky., will be one of the speakers. Several successful Kentucky poultry raisers and Leon Todd of Purdue University are on the program for poultry farmers and for the meeting of the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association.

Sessions will be held each of the four days for homemakers, when subjects of interest to women will be discussed by prominent speakers from Kentucky and other states. A general session for all persons will be held at 11 o'clock each day, when economy, taxation, land utilization, distribution and other subjects will be discussed by nationally known speakers. These include Louis J. Tabor, master of the National Grange; A. J. Glover, editor of "Hoard's Dairyman"; Dr. O. E. Baker, United States Department of Agriculture economist; Nat. B. Sewell, state inspector and examiner. Other prominent speakers at the convention include Eugene Flowers, commissioner of Agriculture; President Frank L. McVey of the University of Kentucky, and Hildegarde Kneeland of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Poultry Profitable

Ninety-nine brooder and laying houses have been built in Trimble county from plans furnished by the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, according to the annual report of County Agent Orem La Master. Trimble county farmers found chickens profitable in 1932, despite low egg prices during much of the year. Grain, milk and other feed were abundant and cheap.

Mr. La Master tells how Loyd Greenwood was encouraged to raise chickens, after his 1931 tobacco crop brought only $64. At the suggestion of the county agent he built a brooder house, using old lumber obtained about the farm. He started 372 chicks in February, and sold them when 13 weeks old for $88. With this money he started another brood and purchased seed for his crops.

New Jersey Champion

The College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, announces that the Jersey cow Raleigh's Eminent Eva, owned by James W. Huey, of Boone county, is the new state champion yearling in the 305-day class. She produced 9,627 pounds of butterfat at the age of a year and 11 months. She displaces Beauty Alice Marie, owned by Bradley Bros., of Ballard county, which held the record with a production of 9,400 pounds of butterfat.

Kentucky Farm Radio Program

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WHAS the week of January 16. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

Jan. 16.—Tobacco market. Agricultural market review, E. A. Johnson.

Jan. 17.—Tobacco market. Healthy, well-bred chicks are an asset, Stanley Caton.

Jan. 18.—Tobacco market. Utilization of power for the farm, J. B. Kelley.

Jan. 19.—Tobacco market. Timely chats with the fruit growers, C. O. Eddy.

Jan. 20.—Tobacco market. What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

Oldest Free School Building

The old school building built by George Washington at Alexandria in 1785, known then as the Alexandria Academy, and still in use by the public school system of that city, was marked with a bronze plaque recently. The civic bodies which participated in the ceremony were the Federal Office of Education, the National Education Association, the Washington Society of Alexandria and the American Legion.

The history of this building was forgotten for many years until recently, when the Washington Society discovered a letter from the first President to Jefferson in which it was stated that it was created "for the education and support of poor children, especially the descendants of those who have fallen in the defense of their country." The old three-story brick structure is probably the oldest free school building in continuous use in the United States. It faces the new Mount Vernon Boulevard and is used for the overflow from the grade school building next to it.

Many patriotic societies and other organizations were invited to send representatives to the ceremonies.

NATION'S LAW MAKERS SEEN AS HARD WORKERS

Banker Tells of Labor Put in by Members of Congress on Mass of Technical Measures

OUTLINING legislative procedure, Robert V. Fleming, President Riggs National Bank, Washington D. C., gave the recent convention of the American Bankers Association a description of the difficulties and problems confronting the law-makers. Mr. Fleming said in part:

"The most important part of organization of the two branches of congress is election of standing committees in the Senate and 46 in the House. These are the workshops of Congress and the real work of lawmaking is done in Committee Rooms.

"The task of legislating for 124,000,000 people is a tremendous one. Of recent years approximately 20,000 bills are introduced annually in the two Houses. Only a small percentage become law, but they must be weighed in committee, accepted or rejected, perhaps amended, reported out, and then considered on the floor.

"Lawmaking involves about 99% of hard and unspectacular work and about 1% of oratory. Few tasks appear so easy and are so difficult as enactment of sound and satisfactory legislation. Few individuals in any line of activity work harder or longer hours than the chairmen of the important committees during a session. I have great sympathy for the members of Congress whose constituents expect undivided attention to every piece of legislation in which they may be interested. From my personal observation, they earnestly and conscientiously endeavor to do all that is humanly possible.

Public Hearings

"When a bill is introduced, referred to committee and printed, the next step, if it is a measure of considerable importance, is to conduct a public hearing. The committee makes an effort to listen to anyone who cares to be heard either for or against a measure, although witnesses are frequently limited as to time. Members of the Cabinet and other officials of the Government usually testify on measures in which they are interested and furnish the committee information in executive session or otherwise. In this way the Administration takes a prominent part in shaping legislation.

"Due to pressure of time and the fact that it is impossible for every subject of legislation, the committees are inclined to give consideration to the merits of arguments presented in testimony and the recommendations of the Cabinet and other officials. It is therefore highly desirable, both from the standpoint of Congress as well as those affected by proposed legislation, that the latter have an opportunity to discuss frankly the effects of such legislation.

"We sometimes complain about the technicalities of legislation, but the technicalities of legislation, and the efforts of organized minorities endeavoring to force class legislation through one House it is a comfort to know such measures may be caught in the meshes of technical procedure in the other and therefore suffer what is termed automatic asphyxiation."

"The purchaser will be required to execute bond, bearing 6 per cent interest from date, with approved security, for the purchase money."

Let's Have Sandwiches!

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON

Director, Heinz Food Institute

MOTHERS everywhere find sandwiches extremely practical for the children's school lunch, whether the lunch is carried or eaten at home. They do not find it easy, however, to plan the variety necessary to prevent monotony. This is especially true where sandwiches must be carried the winter through; yet it is essential to keep the lunch interesting. All variation in sandwiches need not be in fillings; the breadstuffs also should be changed frequently. Rye, whole-wheat, and raisin bread; and rolls, white and graham, will do much to make sandwiches different. When served at home, fillings should often be hot—such as creamed eggs, or fish—as this is an excellent method of assuring your child a good portion of his day's milk requirement. Here are suggestions for sandwiches for the packed lunch and others for the home lunch. All are excellent and easily prepared:

Hard Cooked Egg and Ketchup Sandwiches—Combine 6 hard cooked, chopped eggs with enough Tomato Ketchup to moisten, and 1 teaspoon Prepared Mustard, ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce, salt and pepper to season and a few drops onion juice. Spread between slices of buttered bread. For the packed lunch, wrap each sandwich in waxed paper.

Peanut Butter, Bacon and Pickle Sandwiches—Fry 4 slices bacon until crisp, chop finely and add to ½ cup Peanut Butter and 3 table-spoons India Relish. Spread between slices of buttered bread, using in each sandwich lettuce, if available. These may be either plain or toasted.

Salmon Piquant Sandwiches—Combine the drained contents of 1-16 oz. can of salmon, 1 tablespoon Evaporated Horseradish (soaked for 5 minutes in 2 teaspoons cold water), 4 tablespoons Mayonnaise Salad Dressing and ¼ teaspoon salt. Spread between buttered slices of white bread with a leaf of crisp lettuce. This is also delicious when toasted.

Peanut Butter and Chili Sauce Sandwiches—Blend ½ cup Peanut Butter and 4 tablespoons Chili Sauce, and spread between thin slices of buttered whole wheat bread.

Creamed Tuna Fish Sandwiches—Open 1 can (1 cup) tuna fish and steam over hot water until heated. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan, add 2 tablespoons flour and ½ teaspoon salt, then gradually add 1½ cups milk. Cook until thick, then add 3 tablespoons Preserved Sweet Gherkins, chopped, and a dash of Worcestershire Sauce. Spread a slice of buttered toast with a layer of the fish. Cover with the sauce; add a second slice of toast and more fish and sauce. Garnish with paprika and slices of pickle, if desired.

Boston Bean Sandwich—Drain 1 medium can Oven-Baked Beans (Boston Style) and mash until entirely free from lumps. Add ¼ teaspoon salt and 4 chopped Preserved Sweet Gherkins. Add just enough Mayonnaise Salad Dressing to make a smooth filling and spread between buttered slices of Boston brown bread or whole wheat bread. Lettuce may be used if desired.

BLONDYFIGHTING LETTER SENT

Beattyville, Ky.—Every post commander of the American Legion in this state is in receipt of a letter from Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the organization, which carries a defiance to Legion enemies and calls upon Legion leaders of Kentucky to show the faith of World War veterans in the organization with membership. It was announced here during the week by Carter D. Stamper, commander of the Kentucky department.

"This is a fighting year for fighting men," National Commander Johnson said. "You and I, as commanders, must lead that fight. This is your fight and my fight. We must tear apart the organized attacks being made on disabled veterans, expose misleading propaganda and present the Legion's program of unselfish service."

"To do this requires real Legion enthusiasm. Single handed the enthusiast convinces and dominates; he triumphs over prejudice and opposition, spurs inaction and has an avalanche of enthusiasm means faith in the American Legion."

"The American Legion's fight is the fight of every service man. It is your duty and my duty to carry the word to every eligible man, telling him in no uncertain terms that call again is for full ranks."

"His supporters are the American people as a whole, and the fury of their wrath once aroused and convinced with truth and facts give him a bulwark of confidence that can lead only to victory."

Say, boys, how long are we going to peacefully submit to being bled by bird, beast and human parasites that are sapping our substance and driving us to perjury? Why not get our heads together, begin at the bottom and do a lot of cleaning up that should have been done years ago and let the wide world know that we farmers still have enough red blood left to raise a kid when these parasites begin to drill into us?

Picnics and Panics

By CORONA REMINGTON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. (WNU Service)

THE birds flew close to the ground or sat in little groups on the leafy limbs; they were silent and subdued. It was a heavy, sodden day, the kind when one looks out of the window constantly to see whether the rain has yet begun to fall.

"What's the use of going on?" she asked her mother mournfully. "Anybody can see it's going to rain tomorrow, and who wants to go to a picnic in the rain?"

Mrs. Oliver went on pulling out pinfeathers from the frier she was dressing, also for the picnic. "You can't tell yet, Lucy. Tomorrow ain't here yet and, anyhow, I reckon we'll want this stuff for Sunday dinner, even if you don't get to take some to the picnic."

"I won't want any of it," answered Lucy in a muffled voice.

"Now, child, you mustn't take on that way."

"But, mother, it isn't just an ordinary picnic that's making me so upset. You know Arthur and I have had a scrap, and his asking me to go with him tomorrow made me think he was willing to make up, and I know if I could have him all day to myself I could bring him around. I've been nearly crazy this last month."

"What time's he coming?"

"He said in his letter he'd drive over about ten."

"It'll turn out all right in the end. Don't worry, child. Land sakes! How do you reckon you'll ever get through life a-fretting and worryin' the way you do about every little thing?"

"But it isn't a little thing," Lucy protested miserably.

The rest of the day was filled with preparations for the picnic and Saturday afternoon tasks, and it was late that night when at last the family could go to bed. Everybody was soon asleep except Lucy, who lay wide awake on her back staring into the darkness and listening to the soft falling rain; the drip, drip, drip of the eaves gave her no chance to forget, and the next morning was one solid gray mass of murky clouds and fog.

Lucy tried to keep the tears back when she went down.

"My, my, child! You'd think this was the end of the world. Go put on your good frock and your best smile and look your prettiest when he comes. You can entertain him in the parlor and ask him to dinner. Tell him to turn out all right. You see if it don't."

The girl finally took her mother's advice and became quite thrilled as the time for her lover's arrival approached. The time came, however, but no Arthur Watson; eleven and twelve passed in the same way. At one Lucy rushed to her room and locked herself in, refusing her dinner. Late in the afternoon Mrs. Oliver ventured upstairs. "Honey, maybe he expected you to answer his letter," she suggested through the door.

"No, he didn't," came back in reply, "because he said if I didn't write he'd take it to mean I was willing to go."

It was the next day that Mr. Oliver decided to take matters in his own hands. He never believed in interfering between young folks, but nobody could play fast and loose with his girl.

When Oliver walked into the office where Watson was one of the many cogs in a big wheel, he was immediately offended by the young man's behavior. It was highly unbecoming to one with a guilty conscience. "Want to speak to you," said Oliver gruffly.

"Sure thing," Watson replied, putting down his pen.

"I just want to say one thing. You can't break dates with my gal."

"Break dates? What're you talking about? I haven't broken any dates with Lucy."

"Maybe you didn't write to her and ask her to that picnic over to Hampton yesterday," broke in Oliver.

"Why, I wrote to her, but haven't mailed the letter yet. The picnic's next Sunday. See, the letter's right here in my pocket. Watson dived into his coat pocket, then his face became blank and a sheepish expression spread over it. He put his hand to his head in an effort to think.

"I—I must have mailed it with some other letters," he explained weakly. "I wrote it ahead because I—I was sort of anxious, and planned to keep it until about tomorrow. Do you think she'll forgive me?"

"She's pretty mad," grinned Oliver, once more in good humor. "I reckon you better come over tonight and try to make up with her."

"You bet I will, and I'll fill the car with American beauties, too. But it's just my luck," groaned Watson in a panic, "and I was planning to—"

He flushed and stopped short. It was a very cool young girl who received Watson that evening—cool outwardly, but all a flutter within. She had decided to make him suffer for the suffering he had caused her, but it was only a moment until she was weeping on his shoulder.

"Oh, Arthur, you hurt me so," she sobbed.

"But, honey, don't you know I wouldn't have done it for anything on earth? I've been nearly crazy since I found it out."

Soothing words, the healing power of tears, his caressing arm around her. Peace—joy.

And yesterday was so black.

It is real funny how and why people can be and are fooled; it seems that they delight in it. Our state authorities are advocating the abolishing of the tax on real estate and in lieu enacting a sales tax. This is nothing more than a scheme to get more revenue by fooling the people. A tax is a tax, and why had we not just as well lay on real estate as to pay a greater one to the merchants. Instead of trying to fool the people why don't our officials reduce expenses and try to give the tax ridden public some relief instead of trying to increase their burdens. If all the useless boards and commissions and petty employees were discarded from the payrolls the expenses would be greatly lowered.

FOSTER, OHIO

Jan. 9.—We have been having some lovely winter weather for the past week. Some corn is still out, not husked. A few people are beginning to range around and shift farms, but it hasn't so many changing around as there used to be.

Dewey Steele of Panama, Ky., brought Ammon Carter and his daughter Mrs. Judy Haney of Grassy Creek, Ky., over to see the sick boy, John W. Carter's grandson. And while here Mr. Steele and Mr. Carter attended the Maineville Baptist Church on Sunday morning and took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Testerman, and again attended church in the evening and spent the night with myself and family. The next day we drove over quite a lot of the country. We are always glad to have our friends from old Morgan visit us. I am never too busy to spend some time visiting around when my old Kentucky friends visit us.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fugate, who have been living in the village of Maineville for quite awhile have rented a good farm out in the country and have moved to it and are doing a lot of early plowing. Farmers here are not getting much money out of their farm products but they can have something to eat. So let us not become discouraged, but work the harder.

Many are anxiously looking forward to the revival, which is to begin in the Baptist Church this coming evening. C. F. TESTERMAN

Ladders for Fish

Courtesy of Stone & Webster Engineering Corp., Designers & Builders.

IT probably never occurred to you that fish can climb ladders, but since salmon has come into so great prominence as a source equal to cod liver oil for vitamin A and approximately twice as good as a source of vitamin D, more trouble than ever is being taken in the cultivation and propagation of these fish.

The latest thing is fish ladders which are enabling Columbia River salmon to get over the great Rock Island Dam across the river near Wenatchee when they come home to spawn after years in the ocean.

These ladders consist of a series of pools twenty feet wide, ten feet long, and rising one foot above the next. The total rise is fifty feet in a distance of five hundred feet, and one of the sights of Central Washington recently has been watching big salmon leap from pool to pool at a rate faster than a man can walk up the adjoining incline.
